while it is difficult to establish a close relationship between language form and the racial or cultural characteristics of its speakers an intimate relationship does exist between culture and language content the study of language content needs no special justification since the written records of antiquity are our most valuable source of information concerning the peoples and civilizations which form the object of historical investigation but language as a formal structure like the tools and institutions of a society represents a kind of transmitted organism and as such falls into the category of data which can be ordered in typologically related sequences thus for the historian who is interested primarily in tracing interacting continuities the study of the history and development of a language apart from its use as a vehicle for oral and written traditions provides useful and sometimes unique evidence of otherwise undiscernible ethnic and cultural affiliations
